This collection is available at The State Historical Society of Missouri. If you would like more information, please contact us at shsresearch@umsystem.edu.

This collection consists of correspondence and business papers of the Gideon-Anderson Lumber & Mercantile Company concerning the lumber trade in southeastern Missouri and northeastern Arkansas. Based in Gideon, Missouri, the company operated primarily in Dunklin, New Madrid, and Pemiscot counties in Missouri. The collection includes papers from two subsidiary operations, the Gideon Cooperaage Company and the Gideon & North Island Railroad Company.

The Gideon-Anderson Lumber & Mercantile Company was organized at Decatur, Indiana. Its officers were William P. Anderson, president, M. S. Anderson, vice-president, Charles F. Meentemeyer, secretary, and M. V. Mumma, treasurer. Frank E. Gideon of McGill, Ohio, was also a founder. The company moved to New Madrid County, Missouri, around 1900, where it located along the line of the St. Louis & Gulf Railroad and began cutting the virgin forest of the swamps of southeastern Missouri. The community which grew up around the lumber camp was named after Frank E. Gideon. It was platted in 1903. The company specialized in red oak lumber, but also cut considerable quantities of other hardwoods, particularly hickory and ash. The mill began with a capacity of 10,000 board feet per day, which was soon increased. Planing, handle and stave mills were added to the complex, which by the eve of World War I had an enormous daily capacity.

Branches of the Houck and Frisco railroad lines carried the products of the mills to market. The Gideon-Anderson Company organized the Gideon & North Island Railroad after 1903, giving it connections with major railways in all directions. The focus of operations shifted gradually southward as logging progressed. In later years the company owned and operated mills in Malden, Missouri, and Jacksonport, Arkansas. The company held extensive land holdings in Dunklin, New Madrid and Pemiscot counties, much of which was reclaimed for agriculture after the forest was cleared and the swamps were drained. The community around Gideon grew rapidly. The mercantile operations also grew, particularly in the housing rental and real estate markets. The land holdings became the basis for a successor company, Anderson Farms of Gideon.

The Gideon-Anderson papers held by the New Madrid Museum are only a small portion of what must have been a voluminous collection. The papers came to the museum via Charles Cluck of Gideon, a former employee of Gideon-Anderson, who secured the inactive files of the firm for their philatelic content. The papers have been organized into three sections: general correspondence, miscellaneous legal and business papers, and freight bills. Nearly all of the material is dated from 1901 to 1919, with only a few items dated from 1920 to 1938. Although the records are not complete, they touch on most facets of the company's operations, and are useful for research on the lumber industry in southeastern Missouri.

The correspondence consists of letters to the company from timber dealers, lumber men, mill operators, equipment salesmen and job applicants. There is more incoming than outgoing mail, but there are carbons of some of the replies by company officers William P. Anderson and Charles F. Meentemeyer. Both men, and Anderson in particular, were shrewd businessmen who paid close attention to the small details of the lumber trade. Their correspondence includes comments on the quality of timber, mill machinery, freight tariffs, and the general state of the lumber trade. Letters from Frank E. Gideon in Ohio and Fred Bimel in Indiana indicate that the company maintained trade connections in those areas. In Missouri, the company cut timber on its own lands, leased properties, and contracted for the entire production of smaller mills such as the Senath Manufacturing Company of Senath, Missouri. The company also sold its own blank stock to stave mills, cooperages, and handle factories. The papers indicate trade connections with firms in Caruthersville, Kennett, New Madrid, Parma, Pascola, Senath and Wardell in Missouri, and in Blissville, Blytheville, Paragould, and Piggott in Arkansas.

The legal and business papers evidence other aspects of the lumber company's business. Included are farm and housing rental accounts, balance sheets for the J. M. Baird and Gideon Cooperage companies, lists of charitable contributions for injured or disabled workers, garnishment notices served on employees, and a petition to establish a new utility company at Gideon in 1938. The miscellaneous papers also contain application blanks for membership in the House of HOO-HOO, a lumberman's fraternal organization, and the correspondence between Robert B. Meentemeyer and the Order of Railroad Telegraphers. The exchange concerned Meentemeyer's attempt to join the telegraphers and the complications which ensued when his weight did not meet the minimum standard set by the Order. Advertising materials also in this section include descriptions and illustrations of sawmill equipment and parts, lubricants, wire fence, rat poisons, and life insurance.

The last section of the collection contains freight bills and bills of lading, 1903-1916. Most are for shipments on the Frisco system. There are also bills for movements on the St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern Railway, and the Gideon & North Island Railroad.
