 Four folders.

This collection is available at The State Historical Society of Missouri. If you would like more information, please contact us at shsresearch@umsystem.edu.

These are papers of the Cullimore family of journalists and outdoor writers. The collection consists of correspondence between Donald B. "Rocky" Cullimore and Dan Saults, and a compilation of Saults's articles in Branson and Springfield, Missouri, newspapers.

This collection represents the first installment of what will be a much larger assemblage of Cullimore family papers. It centers on conservationist and author Dan Saults, a close friend of the Cullimore family, and supplements materials in the Saults collection (WHMC-Rolla R403). Saults was a leader in promoting conservation efforts in Missouri. A native of Knob Noster, Missouri, he bought the Knob Noster Weekly Gem after graduating from the University of Missouri School of Journalism. He operated the paper until World War Two. Saults served as an officer in the 339th Infantry Regiment in North Africa and Italy during the war, after which he spent a year in Texas. In 1947, Saults joined the Missouri Department of Conservation, heading the department's information service and editing the Missouri Conservationist. Later he became the deputy director of the department. In 1964, Saults joined the U. S. Department of the Interior and moved to Washington, D.C., where he worked with the Bureau of Land Management and the Fish and Wildlife Service. He retired in 1973. Saults and his wife, Helen, a former National Park Service employee, moved to a home near Branson, Missouri. He remained active in conservation circles and in 1979 was elected president of the Outdoor Writers Association of America. He wrote a weekly column, "Saulty Observations," for the Branson Beacon, 1973-1979, and a weekly column for the Springfield Daily News, 1982-1985.

Through journalism and shared interests, Saults became a personal friend of Donald Grant Sharp Cullimore (1907-1989). A native of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, Cullimore majored in journalism at the University of Missouri-Columbia before beginning a twenty-year career as a newspaperman and editor for the Jefferson City News Tribune and the Wichita Eagle. In 1942 he became the editor of war news from the European Theater for the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. He also began writing feature stories and articles on "outdoor" themes, and published a groundbreaking series of articles in the Post-Dispatch on the Irish Wilderness of southeastern Missouri. He joined the Outdoor Writers Association of America (OWAA) in 1951. In 1953, Cullimore became the first public relations director for Johnson Outboard Motors in Illinois, and in 1958 became the public relations director for Gator Trailers of Florida. After the death of his wife in 1958, he became a freelance writer and editor; remaining active in the OWAA. In 1963, he became the first full-time executive director of OWAA, a post he held until his retirement in 1972. During his tenure, Cullimore successfully revived the OWAA and established it as a nationally-recognized organization in the outdoor field. In 1976, Cullimore was asked to write the history of the OWAA, resulting in the 1977 publication, Fifty Years of O.W.A.A.—A Historical Summary of the Outdoor Writers Association of America. Cullimore retired to Holiday Island, Arkansas, where he continued writing and editing until his death in 1989.

Cullimore and Dan Saults led efforts to adopt of the Irish Wilderness as a federally-protected wilderness area. Along with Leonard Hall and other conservationists, they were also active in the fight to prevent damming of the Current River by the Army Corps of Engineers.

Two of Cullimore's sons, Donald Barton "Rocky" Cullimore and Lee Marmaduke "Duke" Cullimore, followed his path into journalism and "outdoor" writing. Duke Cullimore was born on 20 September 1933 in Jefferson City, Missouri. He majored in journalism at the University of Missouri-Columbia. He was executive director of the American Water Ski Association, vice-president of Outdoors Inc. (Columbia, Mo.), and editor of Outdoors and Water Skier magazines. He currently resides in Versailles, Missouri.

Donald Barton "Rocky" Cullimore was born on 30 March 1940 in Wichita, Kansas. He majored in American History at George Mason University. He spent many years in newspaper journalism with the Jacksonville (Fla.) Journal, Jefferson City (Mo.) News Tribune, Oregon Journal, (Portland, Ore.) Oregonian, and Pacific Coast newspapers. He was editor of Outdoor America, Environmental Action, and Water Skier magazines. He currently resides in Fayette, Missouri, where he is a freelance writer and director of public relations and publications at Central Methodist University.

Folders 1 and 2 contain the correspondence between Rocky Cullimore and Dan Saults. Like his father, Rocky Cullimore became a close personal friend of Dan Saults, crediting him as "a significant mentor to me. He shaped my reading habits, encouraged my intellectual curiosity and honed my passions in politics and philosophy." Cullimore and Saults were in Washington, D.C. at the same time (Saults at the Department of the Interior and Cullimore with Environmental Action). The two began a regular correspondence when Saults left Washington for Branson, Missouri, that continued until Saults's death in 1985. The major themes of their correspondence are the Outdoor Writers Association of America, the Missouri Department of Conservation, national politics during the Carter and Reagan administrations, people and events in Washington, D.C., local events and life in Missouri (especially Taney County) and Oregon, the Ozark Institute of Eureka Springs, Arkansas, journalism and the newspaper business, and friends and mutual acquaintances among journalists and writers including Clay Anderson, Robert Anderson, Chuck Cadieux, L. B. Cook, Donald G. Cullimore, Elmo Ingenthron, Lee Marmaduke "Duke" Cullimore, Harry Fey, Jim Keefe, Lynn Morrow, George Reiger, Joel Vance, Ron Way, Patsy Yarnell, and others.

Folders 3 and 4 contain copies of Saults's weekly columns in the Branson Beacon and Springfield Daily News. The wide-ranging columns covered many of the same themes as discussed by Saults and Cullimore in their correspondence. Saults frequently sent Cullimore drafts or published versions of his articles, and there are many references to the columns in their correspondence. The articles reveal Saults's wide interests, writing style, and wit. Some of the articles are autobiographical, such as those about his experiences in the 339th Infantry Regiment in Italy during World War Two, but many more concern a wide range of political, social, and historical topics including natural history, local and national politics, Taney County, development of the Branson area, the Outdoor Writers Association of America, the Irish Wilderness, conservation, leading conservationists and students of the Ozarks such as Don Cullimore, Pete Czura, George B. Herndon, Elmo Ingenthron, Dru Pippin, and Eugene Poirot, and journalists including Harry J. Fey, James Keefe, and Joel Vance.
