Historical Note:

In the early 1970s, three St. Louis area churches—Trinity Episcopal, Second Presbyterian, and First Unitarian—formed the Joint Community Board, a social service organization dedicated to administrating and funding community service projects in the Central West End neighborhood. The programs included the After School Program, a tutoring service for underprivileged youth; the Summer Program, a job-placement program for local young adults; and the TWC Block Builders, which purchased and refurbished housing for families. The Joint Community Board also helped to sponsor the Mustard Seed Festival, a four-day festival held in Maryland Plaza. On February 28, 1984, the Joint Community Board merged another Central West End community service group, the Joint Community Program Board.

Arrangement:

The papers consist of two folders, arranged alphabetically by type of material.

Scope and Content Note:

The records of the Joint Community Board contain meeting minutes, memos, evaluations, and reports concerning the structure and purpose of the board; financial planning for Joint Community Board-sponsored programs, as well a future sources of funding; assessments of After School Program personnel; and employment opportunities for young adults. Other topics include planning for the Mustard Seed Festival and obtaining equipment for the cleanup of Martin Luther King Park.
