The St. Louis City-County Board of Freeholders Records were donated by Wayne L. Millsap, the chairman of the committee November 11, 1988. Additional records were received December 5, and December 29, 1988 and March 7 and April 12, 1989.

The St. Louis City-County Board of Freeholders was created by the Missouri Constitution of 1875 as a thirteen member panel with the Mandate to propose solutions to boundary issues. The boards first offering to the voters was the separation of the city and county which the electorate approved. The 1987 version of the Freeholders was made up of nineteen members who were asked to reorganize the county municipalities as well as consider the reunification of the city and county. The board began meeting in September 1987 and produced a final proposal a year later. The final proposal never reached the voters as a class action suit brought by non property holders did away with the board and all it's labors.

SCOPE AND CONTENT

The Board of Freeholders collection contains the board minutes, as well as information on the various municipalities of the county and the city. The proposals of other St. Louis organizations such as confluence and the Municipal League are included with other research material which the board used in creating it's final proposal. The issue of fire and emergency service was one of top priority with the board and much information relating to this subject can be found in the records. The board retained the services of a newsclipping agency and the record therefore contain a extensive collection of newsclippings from local publications. The records contain the legal briefs relating to the class action suit which nullified the board. The Internal records of the board consist of personnel records and vouchers for purchases and rentals paid for out of the boards budget. Correspondence from and to the board and it's individual members as well as the various drafts which led up to the final proposal round out the collection.
