Robert Knickmeyer donated the Freedom of Residence, Greater St. Louis Committee, addenda to the Western Historical Manuscript Collection at the University of Missouri-St. Louis in November 1989.

After a year of informal discussion among community leaders, a group of prominent St. Louisans, black and white, founded the Freedom of Residence, Greater St. Louis Committee in March 1961. Volunteers staffed the private non-profit corporation in its early years. An anonymous grant provided the initial funds for the group. Other sources of funds came from membership dues and donations. The committee facilitated integration of housing in St. Louis by sponsoring buyers in previously segregated areas, preparing housing lists of non-segregated units, engaging in community education programs, and supporting fair housing laws.

In 1962, the committee included 100 members. The Reverend William Lorenz, pastor of Grace Presbyterian Church, headed the organization. That same year, the committee succeeded in moving a black family into a previously all-white University City neighborhood.

By 1964, the committee had raised $21,000. This amount included a $5,000 grant from the New York based Horne Crest Foundation. This enabled the hiring of two staff members. Ruth C. Porter, one of the founders, filled the position of Executive Secretary. She kept the job until her death on February 9, 1967.

Affiliated chapters, such as the Florissant Council, formed in suburban communities in 1965 and 1966. The combined efforts of the groups resulted in major accomplishments for 1965 and 1966. The committee provided speakers for 157 meetings and distributed 30,000 pamphlets entitled, "New Era in Housing," to black and white communities. The committee also sponsored, in cooperation with religious leaders and other local fair housing groups, a Fair Housing Week in February in 1965. At this event the committee distributed pledge cards to elicit community support. By the end of 1966, the Greater St. Louis Committee had succeeded in finding 600 black families housing in 130 neighborhoods and 37 municipalities throughout the St. Louis area.

The committee's funds ran out by the end of 1966, and the office closed. In January 1967, the Horne Crest Foundation notified the committee of a $5,000 grant contingent on matching funds. Local donors contributed $8,600 and the committee reopened its office.

Until 1967, the Freedom of Residence Committee worked primarily with middle income families. In April 1967, the Human Development Corporation, a federal agency, approved a $16,000 program with the committee for moving blacks out of the city's ghettos.

A landmark Supreme Court ruling evolved from the efforts of the Freedom of Residence, Greater St. Louis Committee. In 1965, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lee Jones, an interracial couple, attempted to buy a house from a suburban developer. The Alfred H. Mayer Corporation refused to sell to them because Mr. Jones was black. The Joneses went to the Freedom of Residence office. After speaking with a staff attorney, Samuel H. Liberman II, they agreed to sue. The case went to the U.S. Supreme Court. In June 1968, the court ruled that discrimination in all housing sales and rentals was illegal. The decision provided Freedom of Residence with a previously lacking legal tool for integrating neighborhoods. In 1969, the committee received $150,000 which they used to provide assistance to families denied housing on the basis of race. The funds came from a three-year grant from the Danforth Foundation.

SCOPE AND CONTENT

The Freedom of Residence, Greater St. Louis Committee Addenda, 1957-88, documents the committee's activities in integrating housing in the metropolitan St. Louis area. The addenda contains a variety of documents--flyers, correspondence, grant proposals, pamphlets, case files, advertising material, research material, radio spots, photographs, information on Congressmen, mailing lists, educational brochures, and housing lists.

The documents, such as court briefs, relating to the legal actions which Freedom of Residence assisted in give an accurate account of this committee's important work. Important cases include Jones vs. Mayer and Freedom of Residence vs. City of Jennings, MO. Also found in this collection is information concerning similar cases from areas across the United States. These cases, plus several studies and journal articles, were used in Freedom of Residence's fight for integrated housing in St. Louis.

Freedom of Residence also cooperated with several other organizations such as the National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing, the Housing and Urban Development office and the Federal Housing Administration. All of the records which document this interaction is also in this collection. House listings and correspondence make up the bulk of this material.

This collection is important because it accurately and fully documents the integration battle which occurred in St. Louis. In this collection, the researcher can find the progression of events which led to the committee's foundation and exactly how they combatted housing discrimination.
