The St. Louis Coalition of Labor Union Women chapter of the National CLUW which was founded in Chicago in March 1974. Its main purpose is to help union women attain their rights as workers. In October 1974 the St. Louis CLUW was founded by Betty Finneran, a teacher at Roosevelt High School, accepted the chapter's charter as its first president. CLUW assisted families of air traffic controllers in the area during the 1981 nationwide PATCO strike. St. Louis CLUW opposed the closing of the Homer G. Phillips Hospital and supported the unsuccessful efforts to reopen it. Work by the organization helped defeat the "right to work" law in Missouri.
